

This beautiful Grade II-listed building surrounded by greenery is a fine example of Georgian architecture. It features a grand portico with six columns and a central pediment. The building is set in a landscaped garden with mature trees and a path leading to the entrance.

As a result of its historical significance, the building is now a museum and is open to the public. It is a must-visit for anyone interested in the history and architecture of the city.

The building faces Bloomsbury Square, which is one of London's earliest square and is located in the heart of
